

Pittsburgh-region artists, makers & nonprofits working with kids:

Would you like to share an idea for a Maker Monday project with us?

What's a Maker Monday project? Maker Monday is a popular weekly offering published at Kidsburgh.org that shows kids (and their grownups) how to do an easy, fun art or science project. You can find more than 100 examples right here for kids of all ages, some more complex than others. As you look through them, you'll see we strive to make sure each project can be done with items a family might have around the house or could buy inexpensively at a dollar store.

Why would I share one? First, you'll be bringing an accessible, creative experience to local kids whose families read our free local news site. Second, we can share a paragraph that describes your organization or your creative work, as well as a link to your website or socials.

What would I need to submit? A description of the project, the materials needed, and step-by-step instructions and photos or video to help kids (with or without help from a grown-up) understand how to do the project.

Where can I submit a project or ask a question? E-mail us at info@kidsburgh.org. We'd love to hear from you!
